Words to the Herds

This catalogue contains, when broken-down into size and color, over ten thousand items. It is generated from our computer inventory file and is the most accurate on the day of printing. As time passes it becomes less and less accurate. Therefore it is printed four times a year to give you the most up-to-date information possible.

By the time this catalogue reaches you new products will be added and older ones dropped. Some prices will go up and others will go down. Regardless, the SOH Quarterly is the most comprehensive, yet easy to understand catalogue available for skateboarders and snowboarders today.

Therefore I would like to thank the editors of TWS, Thrasher, and ISM for creating a common language understood by skateboarders and snowboarders worldwide & without which this catalogue would be unintelligible & completely useless.

In this issue the SOH Quarterly expands to include articles on people who make a difference in your sport. We hope you like our first piece, "Talking with Sims", and I personally want to get some letters telling me what you think about it.

SKATES ON HAIGHT Mail Order Policies:

Some of the customers that call for the first time get a false impression of what we are all about. Usually, this is because they call the 800 lines for information instead of using the (415) 431-5054 number. Briefly, these are some answers to the most asked questions:

1) We can only order what is actually in stock at this time. The computer has us on real time, so it is first come, first served. We cannot "hold" any item, for anyone. When you order it one the phone, you will find out instantly if it is available and if it is, it will have been reserved just for you, even if it is the last one! We cannot make a backorder and special orders are not possible.

2) We cannot guarantee color on tee-shirts, sweatshirts, sweatpants and a few other items. We can take a color request at the end of an order, and if that color is available, we will gladly give it to you. Your order taker is at a computer facility and has no access to the color of the merchandise. We DO guarantee style and size.

On decks, we describe the deck by the general color it is painted or stained. Even if you call the Information Line and they look a deck in a given color and tell you what the design looks like and the colors of it, WE WILL NOT GUARANTEE COLOR OF THE DESIGN!! That deck may be sold soon after your call and the next one on the stack in the same color may have a different color design. This DOES happen.

The manufacturers of decks and clothing do not allow us to order by color! We never know what colors we will have until the shipment arrives, hence cannot honestly tell you we will ever have a given color in a style ever again! Sometimes all the decks will be red, or the medium shirts pink and all the large blue.

3) FIT: the customer is responsible for fit. We realize it is difficult to order by phone, but we cannot fit you from our end. The Information Line staff will be glad to help you all they can, but ultimately the responsibility is on the customer to know what is ordered.

4) Your order taker will read your order back to you. Please make any corrections at this time, because if what you receive is what was ordered, you will be responsible for all the shipping to exchange it, or a 20% restocking fee for refunds, as well as the shipping.

5) ERRORS. Our system has improved to the point where our error percentage is far below 1% at this time. However, we do make mistakes. If you receive the wrong item, call Dept. 10 at (415) 431-5054. Generally, we will have to wait until we have received the incorrect item from you before we can ship out, at our expense, the correct item. Please include a copy of your Invoice and write on it clearly what was wrong and what you want us to do. We cannot reimburse you for your phone call nor your shipping expense back to us.

6) All returned items must be in NEW condition. If you skate your deck, wash your shirt, wear your shoes outside, etc. they are yours to keep.

7) Broken decks are returnable directly to the manufacturer usually. See the separate section for details.

Most other products have some warranty by the manufacturer. We will replace any item that the manufacturer will cover. The decision of the manufacturer is final.

8) DELIVERY TIME. Your order taker will give you an estimated time of delivery. This is a guess and courtesy, not in any way a guarantee! Almost all orders are shipped the same day the order is taken, but we cannot be responsible for any delays, nor for any package arriving early. A package may not be traced until the day after the last estimated day of delivery given by your order taker.

9) Out-of-Stock. Rarely, when we go to fill an order, the last of an item is not suitable for sale. We make every effort to maintain an accurate inventory, however, we have never been able to shut down completely for a week to count everything. You will be contacted should we not have some item we thought we did. We are sorry for any delays so incurred, but cannot be responsible for any problems such a delay might cause.

See page 12 for notes about ordering trucks helmets and decks.

TALKING WITH SIMS

SOH's Carol conducts an exclusive telephone rap with Tom Sims, the Father of the Sport.

Without a doubt, the hottest topic on the SOH phone lines and in the stores this year is snowboarding. A lot of skaters, and others, are ready to take a board to the slopes, but need introductory information. If I were interested in snowboarding, the person I would most want to hear from is Tom Sims, a man who has snowboarded since before it was called "Snowboarding", and, not incidentally, designs and tests the superb boards manufactured under his name. Tom Sims always has a lot of projects going, so I was thrilled when he graciously agreed to help me put together an article for the SOH catalog, even though he was asked at the last minute, during his busiest time of year. The following piece is the result of a conversation he and I had on the last day of 1987. Because I knew next to nothing about the sport, the questions are entry level. Hopefully, Tom Sims will have another opportunity soon to answer the more technical questions that I know are on the minds of the great number of people already proficient in the sport. For now, SOH is pleased to present Tom Sims:

This is a talk with Tom Sims on the afternoon of December 31, 1987.

CAROL: When did you get involved with snowboarding and what was it like?

TOM: Well, I built my first snowboard in 1963. I was in wood shop class in junior high and I was a skateboard addict and we had snow on the streets in New Jersey quite often during the winter. I would skateboard in the winter no matter how cold it was if the streets were free of snow and ice so the weather didn't bother me. But when the snow and ice were on the road I figured I'd make a board without trucks and wheels for the hills and that was how it all got started. The board was rather short, it was only about thirty inches long and it had a kicked-up front. It had little pieces of carpet on it for traction and U-nails tacked all over it, and I wore sneakers or hiking boots. But that's how I got started—25 years ago.

CAROL: Did you have buddies doing it with you?

TOM: I built a few in wood shop and then the wood shop teacher told me I couldn't make any more at school so I set up a little factory in my dad's garage where we made skateboards and snowboards and I supplied all my comrades. There was probably ten of us that were actively snowboarding all during the early sixties as we were in junior high and high school.

CAROL: So this was all on the East Coast.

TOM: Right. And we had a dozen snowboarding spots that had nicknames; it was a major affair for us.

CAROL: What did the parents think of all this?

TOM: Well, one of the runs was called San Voyad which was a portion of three different family names. We had a run that went down through the yards of three wealthy families on a golf course. Mansions. After making numerous runs we would start thrashing their lawns so they kicked us out and we went and found different spots that were in the woods. Then we started building banks with shovels out of dirt in the summertime and then when we returned to them in the winter we would have these perfect banks. So we were building little mini halfpipes quite a while ago. But we had no bindings at the time so we really couldn't think of getting air or anything like that, it was just basically banks that we would build, not true halfpipes by any means.

CAROL: How did you get to the West Coast?

TOM: I ended up going to New England in '69 to go to school in New Hampshire; surfed quite a bit up there but there was no snow the winter of '69 in New England: '69—'70. And that was also the same year of the huge surf in California, and I was subscribing to SURFER magazine. So here I am reading all these articles about huge surf in California, and here I am on the ski team in New England, trying to snowboard, skateboard and what have you and I got fed up with it and threw everything in my convertible Corvair and took off with the top down in February for California. I had so many surfboards, snowboards, skateboards, and skis that I couldn't put the top up.

CAROL: Did your family come out then?

TOM: They came out years later when they got fed up with the mosquitoes and the humidity.

CAROL: And what about the Burtons. What were they doing all this time?

TOM: Well, Burton got involved in 1978, approximately fifteen years later than I got started; and between the time that I made my boards and the Burtons came on the market, the SNURFER was the dominant product as far as volume goes. SNURFER, which came out in 1966, sold hundred of thousands. In those days it was called "Snurfing" from 1966 to 1972 or 1973. We were calling our sport at the time "Skiboarding", we weren't calling it "Snowboarding". When the Snurfer came out all my buddies and I were convinced that one of the rich guys at the golf course had ripped off our idea and capitalized on it. But as it turned out that wasn't the case. A gentleman by the name of Sherman Poppins in Michigan had developed a board for his daughter or something. And that's what he patented and licensed to Brunswick and it was kind of good and bad. The Snurfer was a snowplay device so it took us years to talk the ski areas into allowing us to snowboard on their hills because they considered it like a sled or toboggan or saucer which are not allowed even to this day at ski areas. Of course it wasn't until the snowboard turned into an Alpine device that we were able to get on the ski areas. But we were snowboarding on ski areas back in New England. Even though it was a bad snow year we were riding at a ski area called Onset, which was near Hancock, New Hampshire. And we also rode at a ski area near Hillsboro and the Hancock Prep School lifts: we used those. And, finally, when we got kicked off the ski areas because we didn't have metal edges and anything else, we started riding at the Prep School lifts. We got kicked off there, too, when they found out we weren't enrolled in their school. Our best spot was, actually, Lookout Mountain where you would drive all the way to the top with a car full of guys and then you'd snowboard back down in the woods. And when I say there was no snow in '69-'70, it was over in Vermont where the snow was even worse and that's where our training camp was for the ski team at Bromley Mountain. But we actually did have enough snow to snowboard in the woods around college.

CAROL: What did you do during the period when snowboarding wasn't allowed on the regular groomed slopes?

TOM: That's just it: we'd do shuttle runs, and Lookout Mountain was our favorite spot. It was about a half-mile run from the top of this mountain all the way back down to the highway and then we'd just shuttle each other back and forth, take turns driving.

CAROL: Did you ever go climbing into snowboarding places?

TOM: Years and years later—serious mountaineering. But I used to snowboard at Mammoth Mountain, I used to snowboard at Squaw. I predated the outlaw days, before it really got banned out here on the West Coast.

CAROL: Then what happened: how did snowboarding in ski areas get unbanned?

TOM: Well, let me see; let's go one step at a time. Banning occurred in the early '80s before metal edges when kids would go out of bounds to get to the powder because their boards wouldn't work very good on the hardpack. It happened at Sugar Bowl Ski Area that one day I was up there a kid went out of bounds, not on our team; a kid that wanted to tag along and watch our team do a photo session up there at Sugar Bowl, up by Donner Ski Ranch; and this kid kept going out of bounds and turns out they didn't just kick him off, they kicked the sport off the hill. At Squaw Valley they never really did allow it. They used to let me up, by myself. And, at Mammoth, when I used to go up in the late '70s to snowboard—from about 1976 to 1979 I used to snowboard quite a bit—nobody really checked to see what I was doing; because I used to hide myself in the lift line for the tram, and then I'd snowboard down through the woods from the mid tram tower down through the woods next to Stump Alley and I'd come back down and just sneak back. I think it was probably in the early '80s I went up there one day, after developing a more high-tech board and the mountain manager spotted me coming and that was the end. And he told me a bunch of kids had shown up on another brand board, and had mouthed off, and caused a big problem. That must have occurred winter '80-'81, because it was the winter of '81-'82 when I showed up when they finally said no more snowboarding.

But now they do allow it at June Mountain, which is a sister area of Mammoth, and it's quite a good snowboard mountain; especially if the lower runs are open.

CAROL: So when things got banned, how did you get them back going?

TOM: Well, when they were banned it really didn't concern me THAT much because we could still go to spots where they did allow it. Slide Mountain allowed it up at Mount Rose area; and as long as we had one good area to go to, we really weren't that concerned. I wasn't that worried about getting areas opened during the early '80s; and the reason is, one, we couldn't make the boards fast enough as it was. But the real reason is I felt there were so many beginners around that the ski areas would possibly allow it, then learn that there's a great deal of traffic problem (now this is before metal edges), and they would then have written policies that said no snowboarding. And then it would take us YEARS to get back on, so I'm glad these ski areas waited, probably by coincidence, until snowboarders in general became competent riders. If you go to Donner Ski Ranch or anywhere on a weekend now everybody's ripping down the hill. Just a few years ago, there'd be one or two guys shredding and a few other people floundering around and that was it. It wasn't too long ago it was just me, Terry Kidwell, Bob Kline, Mike Chantry, Allen Arnbrister, and Keith Daily at Lake Tahoe, and that was about it!

CAROL: Are you glad ski areas have certification requirements for snowboarding?

TOM: Boreal Ridge has a certification program; there's no real standard around the country. A few areas do have a certification program, and I would say its not an unreasonable request by the management to do it. In fact, if anything, it protects snowboarding in general more than anything else; because, if you do get somebody up there that is on a homemade board with no leash and gets up on the hill and the board flies down the hill and hits somebody, the whole sport is damaged. So I don't have any problem with certification programs because its protecting US [snowboarders] more than anyone else—our abilities to go use those lifts in the future. So, for as long as management thinks its necessary, we should just go along with it at those ski areas that require it.

CAROL: Don't you think it insinuates snowboarders are less responsible than skiers?

TOM: If anybody interpreted it that way, I don't think it does any damage to anybody. Everybody knows its a relatively new sport to ski areas. Everybody knows its popularity is rather new and I think very few people would consider it a nuisance. In fact the only person I could see who would be offended would be somebody who doesn't know how to ride!! Or has a homemade board that doesn't work. So its not that big of a deal. Now if its the $10 certification charge that bothers somebody, I think that's a reasonable request that maybe five go to the ski area and five to the instructor, or however it might work. If some ski area were going to charge $25 or some ridiculous amount of money to get certified—heck, those snowboarders are going to go someplace else.

CAROL: Can we talk about Sims Snowboards?

TOM: Sure.

CAROL: Where is the Sims Snowboard plant?

TOM: Newport Beach. Our central factory. We are building a new 12,000 square foot plant to increase our own capabilities in Newport. Raw materials come from all over the world.

"... skateboarders definitely make the best snowboarders ..."

CAROL: Why are Sims Snowboards made of wood?

TOM: I think every snowboard I ever made was wood, except I had a foam and glass board I made for the Ski Cooper Colorado Race in '82, which is down the road from Copper Mountain. When Winterstick had its problems with foam and glass, with the board being so fragile; and also my involvement in the surfboard industry in the late '60s (I used to manufacture surfboards), I just didn't think foam and glass was going to be durable enough. And, as it turns out, that has panned out to be true. All of our boards at one time were a horizontal wood core, which, at the time was the best way to go because it had a forgiving flex pattern which made the board very easy to ride and I felt that was important for the early development of snowboarding. Now that people are better we can go to the vertical wood core so the boards will carve better on ice and be more positive driving. I had a pair of Rossi Strato 102s in 1969. At the time it was the state of the art snow ski. That snow ski today is still so similar to the best snow skis in construction. Its rather simple and our snowboards today are not too much different from those Stratos: that core construction with the vertical wood core. Wood just has fantastic characteristics on ice. And it also has a tremendous flex memory. Years and years the board will flex very similar. If you use a vertical core it doesn't fatigue; where the foam breaks down. And wood's vibration absorbing qualities are excellent. That's why when you're carving on ice with a vertical core, provided the rest of the board is designed properly, it really holds nicely on hardpack and ice.

And, also, one other thing concerning wood. For the time being, I still feel that inserts are the way to go. We haven't had one insert pull out in the last 2 years. And the reason for that is primarily the wood core, glass reinforcing and the insert load pattern. We have three different layers of glass in there. Actually four on the Blade series. But our insert pattern enables one to change the angle of his feet. If we were to just have blanks where you had to mount your own bindings, a lot of people would have a hard time getting them properly placed. You can't put inserts in foam successfully, in my opinion, and have them stay for sure.

CAROL: How did you come up with the design for the Switchblade, which is this year's most popular board?

TOM: First of all, I'd like to explain a little bit about how that board was conceived in my mind before I did anything with building the molds. I was at Telluride, Colorado, giving Bill Sands, the mountain manager a lesson last winter; and I was giving him a lesson on a Kidwell with the big long kicktail and the flat tip-to-tail design. I felt it was the best learning board at the time, possibly the 1500 or the 1600 was a little better. But he had a hard time learning how to traverse because the Kidwell is so loose, which makes a great halfpipe board. But learning how to traverse is such a primary part of learning, not ease of turning, but traversing is probably the most important thing. I realized we were going to have to put

"... surfers are rather timid about snowboarding — They're too vain or something."

camber in a board for somebody to learn on, to keep the tail from washing out. There's been certain brand boards on the market that have a big "V" on the bottom of the tail, and, quite often, you see these as rental boards. When a person tries to learn how to traverse the tail washes out on them. And that's why many instructors refuse to teach on certain boards, because of this problem. Switchblades make great rental boards, only trouble is we can't make them fast enough. I started to think about new shapes after last year's Worlds. Everybody always asks me what kind of board to get. For example: 'Should I get a Kidwell? Should I get a blade?' And I said to myself maybe I should design a board that's an all terrain board, something that will work great in everything. I figured that since race boards were always so specialized, and I knew they were going to get more sophisticated, I figured that was one area that was the least important.

"...The only people I don't get along with are the contest organizers."

So that's basically when I sat down and started to make prototypes; I think I made the first one within two weeks after Breckenridge and all during the spring I was testing them up at Mt. Hood. And, by summer I had the final production models done. And our final trip up there with a bunch of team members, everybody was so excited about the board that I just knew it was going to be a killer board.

CAROL: Is it something a beginner can use?

TOM: Yeah, and that's what's neat about it. You could not take an expert snow ski and put a beginner on it—he's not going to have fun. Its going to be too long, its going to have too much camber, its not going to have the right flex patterns at all. Now, in snowboarding, it would take me too long to explain why, but the fact of the matter is, the Switchblade probably makes the best board for the professional as well as a beginner, just because of those characteristics that are required from a board for either type rider. Obviously I don't think anybody's going to win races; I don't think a grown man is going to win a race on a Switchblade because our 181 race boards are too unbelievable, but, even Shaun Palmer took an impressive third place at Copper Mountain last week on a Switchblade because the 181 was too long for him.

So it will even deliver in slalom racing. And then, of course, the Pocketknife is basically a mini Switchblade so if you've got a small foot, maybe even size 7½ or smaller, the Pocketknife would be a better bet than the Switchblade—no matter what your size or weight or anything. To me, my own theory is: a lot of it comes down to foot size, as far as picking a Switchblade or a Pocketknife. I don't think you're going to find somebody with a size 7½ foot that weighs 185 pounds anyway!

CAROL: Is the Kidwell a more specialized board?

TOM: The Kidwell was originally built to win halfpipe competitions. That's why I built it. And, as it turned out, that's exactly what it did. It won, I can't say exactly, lets just say 8 out of 10 halfpipe competitions I've ever been to—just because that horizontal lamination is nice and forgiving when you hit the other wall, it gives you nice spring when you go to get air, its loose, but yet positive enough so you can keep full control of the board. Its easy for landings with the big kicktail. You can do fakies. You can do lip slides. You can do just about anything on the board. About the only thing the board's not good for is free-riding on ice and hardpack. At the time, it was probably one of the best boards even for that. You know, today its hard to make a board that the ultimate halfpipe board and also the ultimate all terrain vehicle. So, I would say a lot of the more serious riders will still be riding Kidwells in halfpipe competition. And it also makes an excellent powder board. In fact, I'd have to say the Kidwell makes a better powder board than the Switchblade because the horizontal construction gives you a longer flex pattern and a more forgiving flex. Now I have not ridden the Switchblade in bottomless powder yet, but this winter I would like to compare the two up in the British Columbia Bugaboos.

CAROL: Do you get out a lot or is there too much work?

TOM: No matter what I go boarding as much as possible. I'll hit 20 ski areas this winter. I can't sit behind a desk very long.

CAROL: Do you see any particular areas shaping up as real snowboard centers?

TOM: In Europe, I'd have to say probably Davos is going to be a real snowboarding hub. Davos is in Switzerland, southeast of Zurich. In the United States, of course, Stratton has historically been the hub for New England, but probably Jay Peak and other areas are going to attract as much or more attention because of better terrain, and more challenging slopes: Stowe, Vermont; Jay Peak; Sugarloaf, and Stratton, they're all good spots. In Michigan, I'd have to say Boine Highlands; but as far as the entire world, Copper Mountain rules. Vail is supposed to open on the 18th of January; I'll believe it when I see it—I hope its true. But, if they do open that's going to be, could be one of the best snowboard mountains in the world. Accessibility, the back-bowls, all the aspen trees, its got everything. Sure, you're going to find a better natural halfpipe at Mt. Baker, you're going to find better back country powder boarding possibly at Jackson Hole, but, when you consider everything, Vail's going to be phenomenal. If Vail doesn't open for snowboarding, Copper will certainly be the capital for snowboarding in the U.S. Now, in the West, Snow Summit just opened up to snowboarding about three weeks ago and I've been up there whenever I get a chance. That's going to be a real Mecca. Mountain High has been the most popular spot; one, because they really promote snowboarding and its a fun mountain. And, in the Tahoe area, Donner was a secret spot for us—now its no longer a secret. And Homewood opened up and I would say that next year you're going to see Squaw Valley, Heavenly and Kirkwood open; and then instead of Donner and Borreal being popular, everybody's going to go to the bigger mountains.

"She's a ripper. I know so many girls that shred, it's unbelievable."

CAROL: There is a bunch of new types of snowboards and there are now more places to snowboard—the biggest frustration this year seems to be: getting a board.

TOM: This winter will be the last supply problem year. I was quoted in International Snowboard earlier this year predicting there would be a terrible shortage of snowboards this

HOSOI DECKS - HOW TO TELL THEM APART

We carry 8 different "HOSOI" decks currently (and two stickers)!

Number	Description in Listing	Vendor
01.226	SC HOSOI-III DECK	SKULL

The deck just says Hammerhead-III w/ a triangular graphic design, like the SKULL sticker, with splatter coming out.

01.158	SC HOSOI MINI STREET	SC
--------	----------------------	----

Newest deck, "TEAM HOSOI", has the logo of 01.159 (Vert. Model), but with Hosoi skating. This is a 9" deck.

01.159	SC HOSOI NEW VERT DK	SC
--------	----------------------	----

"TEAM HOSOI", Hammerhead (no #), has a logo with printing and rays, no picture. 10" deck.

01.161	SC HOSOI logo 10" OLD	SC
--------	-----------------------	----

Similar to the above SKULL skate deck, but it is Hammerhead-II.

01.162	SC HOSOI street OLD	SC
--------	---------------------	----

Graphic has a DRAWING of Hosoi on a skateboard (like the SC sticker). This is a 9" mini deck.

01.163	SC HOSOI II ramp NEW	SC
--------	----------------------	----

Hammerhead-II w/new GRAPHIC (more like a photo) of Hosoi on a skateboard. This is a 10" deck.

01.165	SC HOSOI street NEW	SC
--------	---------------------	----

Has new shape (wide near the front) w/ a GRAPHIC of Hosoi handstanding on a skateboard, with a street scene in the background. 9" deck.

01.166	SC HOSOI II mini NEW	SC
--------	----------------------	----

Hammerhead-II shape w/ the GRAPHIC like on 01.163 (ramp NEW). This is a 9" deck.

"I wasn't going to be a bookworm. I wasn't going to be a scholar. I was going to be a skaterat."

season. One, that the manufacturers wouldn't be able to make them fast enough; and two, the stores weren't going to be prepared for the onslaught. As it turned out, this happened. We've been trying to prepare for this for many, many, months. If we had tried to produce enough boards for the demand, we would have taken the gamble of not having the quality that I wanted. And, you know, its hard enough keeping control of every single raw material that comes in the door as it is. But, next year, because of our new factory, we'll be able to make as many boards as we need with high quality.

CAROL: Are women involved in snowboarding?

TOM: Well, my fiancé, Michelle, is totally into snowboarding.

CAROL: Why did I know you were going to say that?

TOM: When I first took her snowboarding she had told me that she had skied a few times and I didn't know what to expect. I thought she'd have a hard time. I can't recall the first time, but I remember one trip to Jackson Hole and it was one of her first few times, she was going down from the top on our second day there! She's a ripper. I know so many girls that shred, its unbelievable. I mean Evelyn Wirth, and Petra, Heather and Tina from Tahoe, and Duncan Howitts' wife and daughter up at Mt. Baker. All over the world, I mean, women shred.

CAROL: Do you think its easier to come off a skateboard onto a snowboard or off a ski; or even a surfboard?

TOM: Well, over the years, I've certainly had as much opportunity to observe this as anybody; and I used to feel that surfing would give a person the best preparation for snowboarding. I have changed my mind about that. Turns out, surfers are rather timid about snowboarding. They're too vain or something. I can't figure it out. Skateboarders, definitely, in my opinion, make the best snowboarders. And, I think its because they don't care what other people think. That's probably the most important attitude about snowboarders. I don't know if the word "rebel" is appropriate, or if the word "renegade" is—I don't know if any of those labels are really appropriate. I would say: skateboarders don't care about vanity, they don't care about what other people think. I've never cared what other people think about me. I think that attitude is a good quality. Skaters don't care if you're a beginner, or if you look like a geek out there your first day because at the end of the day you're shredding. Now, this doesn't mean that a snow skier, who's never skateboarded, can't get on a snowboard and rip. I would say a general athletic coordination outweighs everything. But I love going snowboarding with skateboarders.

CAROL: But have YOU ever been a beginner?

TOM: A few years before I started surfing, I skimboarded. I remember running around with a Maltese Cross on my neck, on a chain. I was your classic surf grommet. We thought we were cool surfers but we hadn't even surfed yet—just skimboarders. No, from the first day I built my first snowboard and I went out and rode on it, I thought I did fine on it. And I couldn't understand why my other buddies couldn't pick it up quicker. So, I think its because I started skateboarding first. That was the first thing I did: before surfing, before snowboarding, before skimboarding, before anything, I was a skateboarder. And the very first day I started skateboarding was in LA, probably in 1958 or so. I built a board out of a 2 X 4, and a pair of old roller skates—still have it. And within an hour I was unhappy with it; forced my dad to go over to Sears & Roebuck to buy me a Roller Derby brand skateboard and after that I was the best in the neighborhood. So I just had a knack for it. I found my niche, I guess you'd say. I mean I wasn't going to be a bookworm, I wasn't going to be a scholar; I was going to be a skaterat. That was my career from 1959.

CAROL: What did your parents think of that?

TOM: Well, I have to thank my parents for letting me skateboard all the time.

CAROL: A lot of people have talent and ability, but why do you think you were able to rise to the top in your profession?

TOM: Just from all those years of experience. And I guess there's some genes involved because my mom was a ski racer and my dad was a ski racer, my dad was a surfer in the 30's in Malibu, my mom was a top tennis player and she was captain of her baseball team in high school. I had parents that were athletic and I think that in conjunction with falling in love with skateboarding at a very young age—there's not much more than that. And the fact that I had a competitive attitude from day One about everything I did. I wanted to be the best guy at shooting a slingshot or I wanted to be the best skimboarder. I wanted to have the best treehouses. Even from a young age, I had a competitive attitude. And I don't know whether that's good or bad, but its fine with me.

CAROL: What kind of reputation do you think you have?

TOM: With who?

CAROL: Snowboarders.

TOM: I get along great with snowboarders. I've had run-ins with contest organizers—that's about the only people I don't get along with are contest organizers, whether it be the skateboarding days or the snowboarding days. I just can't put up with people who don't know anything about the sport they're trying to organize.

CAROL: And what is your reputation among skateboard manufacturers?

TOM: Oh, its an extremely, highly competitive industry with petty jealousies and ridiculous rumors and all this kind of stuff and I'd have to say that if there's any manufacturer that's got a problem with... that's his problem. I know personally only some people in the snowboard industry. And all those people I know, there's a highly competitive nature to our relationship. There is obviously a great deal of heated competition in every aspect of this industry. And there's no getting around it. What's kind of funny is this did not occur in anywhere near this intensity in skateboarding. George Powell and I have been buds for over a decade. I'm friends with Stacy Peralta, I'm friends with the guys up at Santa Cruz, I'm friends with Larry Gordon at Gordon & Smith, and the guys at Madrid. Ray Losi's a good buddy too. And also racers, there was a lot of camaraderie I remember in the early skateboarding days. About the only guy I used to have run-ins with was Henry Hester, who now is a good snowboarding pal of mine. But at the time I felt that his ethics in racing were not up to par. But everybody was pretty much a bud, whether it was Alva or Jay Adams or Stacey, myself. I guess there was a real bond between us all because we were all outcasts of society, we were all skaterats and at the time we were pretty much rebels.

CAROL: What are your feelings on releasable bindings and plate vs. high-back bindings?

TOM: Rather than get into the evolution of bindings and how we got to where we are today, lets just go from here forward. I know there's been talk of releasable bindings. My real concern is that releasable bindings will not be as safe as non-releasable bindings. As soon as there's a pair out there that work and I feel it's safe, I'll use them on our boards. At least I'll make them available to our customers. Every prototype I've tried, and some worked like the inventor claimed, I feel they're dangerous. Because of the nature of the beast. You can be coming down aggressively in a mogul field and the binding will release—as it was designed to in a torque situation. Where here you are in a very torque situation, you're in a bump, you're doing a twaker and all of the sudden your back foot comes out, your front leg is in great jeopardy. And I feel that unless it was an extremely sophisticated, probably in the neighborhood of $200.00 retail, for a pair that was engineered properly. It might take 3 or 4 years to get there, but if it was dual release, had idiot-proof adjustments, it might be fine. Its going to force snowboards into the $600.00 range. I guarantee you that, and I'm not so sure that the injury rate, percentagewise will change one iota. I have never seen an injury caused by a binding not releasing on a snowboard. I have heard of one or two sprained ankles, and I'm not so sure they wouldn't have sprained their ankles with release bindings. Just because we're dealing with one platform, or one ski, and when you fall, you almost always fall into the hill. And if you ever high-side, its almost always at a low speed, because you're just on your first day snowboarding. And whenever you fall into the hill, now you slide. I have seen hundreds of wipeouts at downhill competitions over the years or GS competitions, where people have fallen at speeds in excess of 40 or 50 miles per hour, and I've never seen one person get hurt, even at those kind of speeds. If somebody was riding an extremely long snowboard and was forced into an unsafe situation by way of a poor course, somebody could be hurt because their binding didn't release. And that is one situation where releasable bindings could come in handy.

Concerning plate bindings versus high-back bindings: this is probably going to be the number one question for snowboarders next year when they're shopping around for a new board, and reading ads and literature which, quite often, are confusing as hell. I've had an opportunity to test many plate bindings and also numerous boots. What I have found, so far anyway, with the 7 or 8 different kinds of plate bindings I have tried and probably 15 different brands of boots, is that the plate binding is not as versatile as the high-back binding. And here's why: First of all, one of the neat things about snowboarding is you can wear really comfy boots like Sorrels. I think this appeals to a vast majority of snowboarders, surfers, skaters, everybody who's boarding. A high-back binding is the only way you can go when it comes to Sorrel boots—that wipes out plate bindings right there. Now, lets talk about performance. I took a five-day trip to Snow Summit to do a test, and my only goal was to compare all these different boots and plate bindings and high-back bindings; I rode for the first two days with plate bindings only, testing every kind of boot. I would take four runs with each pair of boots. What I concluded from that was certain boots worked better than others.

Obviously, when you're comparing a $400.00 pair of boots to a $100.00 pair affordability is a factor too. Then, the next day, the third day, I changed over with all the same mountaineering boots to the high-back binding and went through the whole test all over again. And there was no comparison. I actually could ride better with all these boots in the high-back bindings. Now I had to put on a super jumbo, 14cm bale to get some of these boots into our bindings. The problem with plate bindings and stiff boots is there is no forgiveness and too little flex. Another factor is with the high-back when you're doing a heel turn, or initiating a heel turn you can really drive into the edge, using your whole leg. But with the plate bindings you are relying strictly on the support of the boot. I also found a slight discomfort or uneasiness with the plate binding it felt like it could pop out—so I didn't feel like I could go a hundred percent. Especially on certain boots that didn't have a real big overhang on the toe. The Valluga 4000 has the best configuration for plate bindings as far as heel and toe holdown, trouble is the Valluga is too stiff. Tim Wendell, one of our team riders used to swear by the Valluga, he won't even get near them now.

Then comes the question of the Koflach Albona. That's almost as stiff. Sure, its a cool looking boot, but its too stiff. And then it seems like the boots that are working the best as far as mountaineering-type boots are the ones that are semi-rigid or the midline boots. The Koflach Viva soft, the Viva lite, the Lowe, the Kastinger, the Raichle—these boots that are halfway between a Sorrel and a ski boot are working a lot better than the real high, rigid mountaineering boots.

Terry Kidwell, Shaun Palmer, Craig Kelly, Dave Weaver, have all gone back to Sorrels after trying stiff mountaineering boots. Other of my team riders feel strongly that some boots are too stiff for snowboarding. And you need a stiff boot for a plate binding. We may see some stiff soled boots with a very soft upper that will work in a plate binding, that may be an ok combination someday. But for right now, those don't exist. And that's why the high-back binding is so neat because any kind of boot works. Once you have the plate binding now you're limited in your choices, all you've done is cut your choices and forced yourself into a much higher price bracket. Damien has misled a lot of people by saying it's the only way to go. He's one of a HANDFUL of riders that are supporting that school of thought. I just disagree.

CAROL: What do you see for snowboard binding improvements for next year?

TOM: Well, I think we're at a point now where we're not going to see a lot of changes in the binding. Our binding is popular worldwide not just by accident. They work the best. Tracker trucks and Indys work. And you haven't seen many changes in skateboard trucks since the late 1950s other than they've gotten wider, and the bushings have gotten a little better and action rubbers have better resilience. Now I have some secrets I can't discuss at this point which will be some improvements to our existing binding.

CAROL: What CAN you tell us about next year's boards?

TOM: It's a secret.

CAROL: So you're testing now.

TOM: Oh yeah, everytime I go snowboarding I'm testing and that's the way it's been since '63.

CAROL: What time of year do you decide on next year's designs?

TOM: That's interesting. I sometimes make improvements right in the middle of the season. I don't feel that I should wait until the next season to make an improvement. If we find a better component, a better screw, better plastics for the binding, we're constantly improving. But, this season we will be producing our boards in full production by June, so we have to finalize our mold design at least 90 days before that. But we can make subtle changes in materials and molding techniques as we go along. So what I'm attempting to do now is finalize all of our templates and mold designs by the end of January for the '88-'89 season.

CAROL: Do you have a physical training program for snowboarding?

TOM: We just had our Sims Race camp at Copper Mountain for one whole week. It went very, well. It was kind of a free form format where we didn't have strict rules—everybody would run gates and we videotaped everybody's runs and then at night we would watch the videotape and critique them. And, basically, you're trying to improve your time everytime you take a run. Now we didn't have a chance to do any halfpipe training because there wasn't enough snow. Copper had a race right after our camp. And we won all three divisions at Copper Mountain, we won the junior's, the women's and the men's after our week of training. So turns out that our I81 model plus our training panned out pretty good. As far as weight training, some of the team members do more training than others. Tim Windel does quite a bit of weight training and he happened to win the race, so I'd say there may be a correlation there for weight training because your upper legs are so important and just your general stamina for racing that it's become more and more important. I used to be able to work in my office for a month and jump on the plane to a race and possibly win, like I did back in Stratton, and at the World's in '84-'85. It's no longer that way.

"As far as drugs and alcohol . . . people who are not using the best common sense are suffering the most. . ."

CAROL: What about drug and alcohol use and snowboarding?

TOM: As far as drugs and alcohol—that's all each person's individual lifestyle and I think those riders that use the most common sense are the ones that are getting the best race results. People who are not using the best common sense on those items are suffering the most in their race results. So that's just a personal thing with each rider. I don't try to enforce anything on them concerning that.

CAROL: What muscles are involved?

TOM: It's mostly the upper legs, the thighs. Ankles and thighs, and when it comes to ankles, it's one of the things that makes skateboarding such a good training for snowboarding. It gives good conditioning in the ankles.

CAROL: What will boards be like in the future?

TOM: As far as Sims boards are concerned, I will guarantee you we are going to stay on the cutting edge. The Switchblade has already set a precedent in high performance boards for all-terrain use. But we will also see very specialized boards like our new I810 which is designed almost exclusively for giant slalom racing. Another change you will see is companies coming out with ridiculously exotic cores to hype the public. The truth of the matter is, that the ski industry promotes foam core skis because they are inexpensive to manufacture. So be aware of advertising claims like the following: "Such-And-Such Board has tubular carbon reinforced PVC foam with injected ceramic sandwich wrap with a bidirectional vacuum tri-axial construction." Watch out for this kind of jive. Your basic vertical wood core with fiberglass reinforcing is probably still the best bet.

Most of the people that are snowboarding today that have been around since the early '80s, are well aware of the massive changes that have occurred each year in board designs. From the removal of fins and the addition of metal edges, to the better sidecuts and performances that they generate. I don't think the changes will be as drastic in the future, because we are zeroing in on the perfect boards. Those companies jumping on the snowboard bandwagon will be basically just copying what we've been doing. And that's good and bad at the same time. At least they'll have a board that probably works, so we won't have a bunch of unridable boards out there, which has happened in the past. Companies jump in, trying to come out with some totally unique idea that doesn't work, can be a headache for everyone. Sims hopes that snowboarders will feel some sense of loyalty to companies that have been involved with this sport as long as we have. I mean we are still considered the pioneers of snowboarding, and we hope that riders remember that when they start seeing companies in it just to make a buck. And I think there's an unwritten responsibility code at the consumer level, that was probably more intact when I was a kid, and I'm not so sure if it's alive today; I can't believe that people go out and buy these new brand snowboards without trying them first! It amazes me. Borrow somebody's board to make sure you like it first. In skateboarding there is such great similarity in performance and construction from board to board, that it may have instilled a sense of security that you can basically just pick the skateboard that looks the coolest and it will probably work as good as any other board. And so now when those same people go into the store they look for the snowboard that looks the coolest or had the best ad in the magazine. But manufacturers can advertise and make claims of anything they want. I feel to encourage people to try a snowboard, to make sure that it works the way you're expecting it to work, is all important. That's why if you can, either rent, borrow, beg, but avoid stealing a board and go try it. Preferably on hard pack because a lot boards that aren't designed properly will still work in powder. I can't mention product names, but I was just appalled when I saw a bunch of kids riding some brand new board on the market the other day. I asked them why they bought that brand board and they said, "It's the latest thing." This kind of thinking is just ridiculous!

"The Switchblade probably makes the best board for the professional as well as the beginner."

If you're out there riding and not having fun, then it's probably not the board for you. In fact, that's the bottom line with snowboarding and everything else.

And if you have any question about the different models of boards, give SOH Customer Service a call, and they'll tune you in.

Keep shredding!

Tom Sims

MY OBSERVATIONS: Besides being an expert on the topic of snowboarding, Tom Sims is also interesting because he is what many skaters would like to be—a man who makes a living from a sport he has always loved.

Best of all, he's not hype; he is real. He answered every question, no matter how trivial, thoroughly and with respect for the readers. He doesn't need four-letter words to make a point and he isn't afraid to express his own opinion, even if it's currently unpopular. In this era of drug-use alarm and "Just Say No" slogans, Tom Sims allows that snowboarders WILL make their own choices, no matter how unwise. That is a gutsy position to take right now and I applaud that he has no need to enforce attitudes.

Tom Sims possesses the qualities of a good teacher: knowledge, patience with the novice, truthfulness and dependability. He spent extra time helping me with all the stuff I didn't know. For that, I am very grateful. Truth is: I wrote what I saw. And, I look forward to seeing what he comes up with next!

BLADE™ SERIES

BLADE™
168 c.m. V.R.C.*

The Sims Blade has cut through all competition winning over 90% of 1st, 2nd and 3rd place finishes in slalom and G/S worldwide during the '87 season. Designed to excel in hardpack and ice, these light and yet super strong boards are the last word in racing. Now available in sleek 1810 G/S and 2010 D/H models. Specify Sims High Back or competition Plate Bindings.

SWITCHBLADE™
163 c.m. V.R.C.*

The incredible Switchblade is living up to its reputation as the hottest freestyle/all-terrain board in the world. Its domination in bumps, 1/2 pipe, crud and ice has to be experienced! You'll need this shredder to stay on the cutting edge.

*V.R.C.™ [Vertical Rock Maple Core] All models available with Sims High Back or Competition Plate Bindings.

POCKET KNIFE™
144 c.m. V.R.C.*

The Pocket Knife is actually a "Mini Switchblade" for mini shredders! This is the ultimate all-terrain board for riders 75 to 125 lbs. Even if you're up to 150 lbs., but have a boot size of 7 1/2 mens or smaller, the Pocketknife will still be the perfect choice.
